1:18 Uniform Rules on Dispute Resolution

Rule 1 Court Connected Dispute Resolution

(a) Scope, Applicability and Purpose of Rules. These rules govern court-connected dispute resolution services provided in civil and criminal cases in every department of the Trial Court. The Ethical Standards in Rule 9 also apply to neutrals who provide court-connected dispute resolution services in the Supreme Judicial Court and the Appeals Court. The purpose of the rules is to increase access to court-connected dispute resolution services, to ensure that these services meet standards of quality and procedural fairness, and to foster innovation in the delivery of these services. The rules shall be construed so as to secure those ends. To the extent that there is any conflict between these rules and the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Massachusetts Rules of Criminal Procedure, the Massachusetts Rules of Appellate Procedure, the Massachusetts Rules of Domestic Relations Procedure, the Juvenile Court Rules, the Standards and Forms For Probation Offices of the Probate and Family Court Department (hereinafter the "Probation Standards") promulgated by the Office of the Commissioner of Probation effective July 1, 1994, or the Rules of the Supreme Judicial Court and the Appeals Court, then the Massachusetts Rules of Civil, Criminal, Appellate, and Domestic Relations Procedure, the Juvenile Court Rules, the Probation Standards, or the Supreme Judicial Court and Appeals Court rules shall control. The Supreme Judicial Court, the Appeals Court, the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, and each Trial Court department may adopt additional rules or administrative procedures to supplement these rules, provided that they are consistent with these rules.

- (b) Guiding Principles. The interpretation of these rules shall be guided by the following principles:
 - (i) Quality. The judiciary, collaborating with others experienced in dispute resolution, is responsible for assuring the high quality of the dispute resolution services to which it refers the public.
 - (ii) Integrity. Dispute resolution services should be provided in accordance with ethical standards and with the best interest of the disputants as the paramount criterion.
 - (iii) Accessibility. Dispute resolution services should be available to all members of the public regardless of their ability to pay.
 - (iv) Informed choice of process and provider. Wherever appropriate, people should be given a choice of dispute resolution processes and providers and information upon which to base the choice.
 - (v) Self-determination. Wherever appropriate, people should be allowed to decide upon the issues to be discussed during a dispute resolution process, and to decide the terms of their agreements.
 - (vi) Timely services. Dispute resolution services, to be most effective, should be available early in the course of a dispute.
 - (vii) Diversity. The policies, procedures and providers of dispute resolution services should reflect the diverse needs and background of the public.
 - (viii) Qualification of neutrals. Dispute resolution services should be performed only by qualified neutrals. There are many ways in which a neutral may become competent, and there are many ways to determine qualifications of neutrals, such as assessing performance and considering a neutral's education, training, experience and subject matter expertise.

Rule 2 Definitions.

As used in these rules, the following terms shall have the following meanings:

- "Arbitration" means a process in which a neutral renders a binding or non-binding decision after hearing arguments and reviewing evidence.
- "Case evaluation" means a process in which the parties or their attorneys present a summary of their cases to a neutral who renders a non-binding opinion of the settlement value of the case and/or a non-binding prediction of the likely outcome if the case is adjudicated.
- "Clerk" means the clerk, clerk-magistrate, recorder, or register of a court, or a designated assistant clerk-magistrate, assistant recorder or assistant register of probate.

- "Community mediation program" means a non-profit, charitable program whose goals are to promote the use of mediation and related conflict resolution services by volunteers to resolve disputes including those that come to, or might otherwise come to, the courts.
- "Conciliation" means a process in which a neutral assists parties to settle a case by clarifying the issues and assessing the strengths and weaknesses of each side of the case, and, if the case is not settled, explores the steps which remain to prepare the case for trial.
- "Court" means the Land Court, the Boston Municipal Court, or a division of the District Court, the Superior Court, the Probate and Family Court, the Housing Court or the Juvenile Court. The provisions of these rules addressed to courts shall apply to judges, clerks, probation officers and other employees of these courts. For the purposes of Rule 9, "court" also includes the appellate courts.
- "Court-connected dispute resolution services" means dispute resolution services provided as the result of a referral by a court. "To refer," for purposes of this definition, means to provide a party to a case with the name of one or more dispute resolution services providers or to direct a party to a particular dispute resolution service provider.
- "Dispute intervention" means a process used in the Probate and Family Court and in the Housing Court in which a neutral identifies the areas of dispute between the parties, and assists in the resolution of differences.
- "Dispute resolution service" means any process in which an impartial third party is engaged to assist in the process of settling a case or otherwise disposing of a case without a trial, including arbitration, mediation, case evaluation, conciliation, dispute intervention, early neutral evaluation, mini-trial, summary jury trial, any combination of these processes, and any comparable process determined by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management of the Trial Court or the Supreme Judicial Court to be subject to these rules. The term "dispute resolution service" does not include a pretrial conference, an early intervention event, a screening, a trial, or an investigation.
- "Early intervention" means a compulsory, judicially supervised event, early in the life of a case, with multiple objectives relating to both scheduling of litigation and selection of dispute resolution services.
- "Early neutral evaluation" means case evaluation which occurs early in the life of a dispute.
- "Immediate family" means the individual's spouse, domestic partner, guardian, ward, parents, children, and siblings.
- "Mediation" means a voluntary, confidential process in which a neutral is invited or accepted by disputing parties to assist them in identifying and discussing issues of mutual concern, exploring various solutions, and developing a settlement mutually acceptable to the disputing parties.
- "Mini-trial" means a two-step process to facilitate settlement in which (a) the parties' attorneys present a summary of the evidence and arguments they expect to offer at trial to a neutral in the presence of individuals with decision-making authority for each party, and (b) the individuals with decision-making authority meet with or without the neutral to discuss settlement of the case.

- "Neutral" means an individual engaged as an impartial third party to provide dispute resolution services and includes but is not limited to a mediator, an arbitrator, a case evaluator, and a conciliator. "Neutral" also includes a master, clerk, clerk-magistrate, register, recorder, family service officer, housing specialist, probation officer, and any other court employee when that individual is engaged as an impartial third party to provide dispute resolution services. For purposes of Rule 9, "neutral" also means an administrator of a program providing court-connected dispute resolution services.
- "Program" means an organization with which neutrals are affiliated, through membership on a roster or a similar relationship, which administers, provides and monitors dispute resolution services. A program may be operated by a court employee or by an organization independent of the court, including a corporation or a governmental agency. A program operated by a court employee may include one or more court employees or non-employees or a combination of court employees and non-employees on its roster.
- "Provider" or "provider of dispute resolution services" means a program which provides dispute resolution services or a neutral who provides dispute resolution services.
- "Screening" means an orientation session in which parties to a case and/or their attorneys receive information about dispute resolution services. The case is reviewed to determine whether referral to a dispute resolution service is appropriate, and, if so, to which one. In a screening, there may also be discussion to narrow the issues in the case, to set discovery parameters, or to address other case management issues.
- "Summary jury trial" means a non-binding determination administered by the court in which (a) the parties' attorneys present a summary of the evidence and arguments they expect to offer at trial to a six-person jury chosen from the court's jury pool, (b) the jury deliberates and returns a non-binding decision on the issues in dispute, (c) the attorneys may discuss with the jurors their reaction to the evidence and reasons for the verdict, and (d) the presiding neutral may be available to conduct a mediation with the parties.

Commentary

"Court-connected dispute resolution services." This definition does not alter the fact that parties are free on their own initiative to obtain dispute resolution services which are not court-connected.

"Neutral." Judges are not included under the term "neutral" in this section because there are other provisions and rules which apply to the functions of judges.

Rule 3 Administrative Structure for Court-Connected Dispute Resolution Services.

(a) Appointment of Standing Committee on Dispute Resolution. There shall be a Standing Committee on Dispute Resolution consisting of up to twenty persons appointed by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management in consultation with the Chief Justices of the Trial Court departments. Each department of the Trial Court shall be represented on the Standing Committee. Members shall be appointed for three year terms and may be reappointed for additional terms when their terms expire. The Standing Committee shall be composed of: judges; other court personnel; attorneys; members of the public; academics; and providers of dispute resolution services. In order to achieve diversity in the membership of the Standing Committee, the Trial Court shall attempt to make funds available for expenses associated with participation in the Committee.

- (b) Duties of Standing Committee on Dispute Resolution. The Standing Committee shall advise the Chief Justice for Administration and Management of the Trial Court with respect to standards for court-connected dispute resolution services and the implementation and oversight of court-connected dispute resolution services throughout the Trial Court. The Standing Committee shall work to ensure access to court-connected dispute resolution services, to ensure the quality of the services, and to foster innovation in the delivery of the services.
- (c) Trial Court Departments. The Chief Justice of each Trial Court department may appoint an advisory committee on that department's court-connected dispute resolution services composed of judges, other court personnel, attorneys, academics, members of the public, and providers of dispute resolution services, including representatives of community mediation programs where they provide services to that court department. In order to achieve diversity in the membership of an advisory committee, the court shall attempt to make funds available for expenses associated with participation in the committee. An advisory committee shall function so as to avoid conflict of interest or the appearance of conflict of interest. Each such Chief Justice may designate an employee as the department coordinator of court-connected dispute resolution services. Every Trial Court chief justice who approves dispute resolution programs pursuant to Rule 4(a) shall develop written policies and procedures governing program operations and record-keeping that will enable evaluation of the program.
- (d) Local Dispute Resolution Services Coordinator. The First Justice or the justice with administrative supervision of each court or division within every Trial Court department shall designate one court staff member as the dispute resolution services coordinator for that court or division. By agreement of affected First Justices, one person may be designated as dispute resolution services coordinator for divisions or courts in more than one department which are located in the same or a nearby building. The dispute resolution services coordinator shall maintain information about court-connected dispute resolution services and assist the public in making informed choices about the use of those services. The coordinator, in collaboration with the program or programs to which the court division refers cases, shall develop a system to record and compile data as required by Rule 6(g).
- (e) Technical Assistance for Implementation of Dispute Resolution Services. The Chief Justice for Administration and Management shall, subject to appropriation, provide advice and consultation to Trial Court departments, courts, advisory committees and designated dispute resolution staff to assist in developing and operating court-connected dispute resolution services in accordance with the rules.

Rule 4 Implementation of Court-Connected Dispute Resolution.

(a) Development of List of Approved Programs.

(i) The Chief Justice of each Trial Court department, subject to review for compliance by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, shall approve programs to receive court referrals in accordance with these rules. In order to be approved, programs must: agree to meet the operations standards in Rule 7; agree to ensure that the neutrals on their roster who provide court-connected dispute resolution services meet the qualifications standards in Rule 8; and agree to ensure that the neutrals on their roster follow the ethical standards in Rule 9 when providing court-connected dispute resolution services. The list of approved programs shall be developed and maintained through an open process which includes at least the following: advertisement of the opportunity to apply to be on the list; fair assessment of programs; efforts to ensure diversity among neutrals as to race, gender, ethnicity, experience, and training; policies about the length and termination of participation on the list; and procedures for removing a program from the list for cause and/or as a result of a complaint filed pursuant to Rule 4(f).

- (ii) The Chief Justice for Administration and Management shall distribute a combined list of the programs approved pursuant to subparagraph (i). The list shall include information as to each program regarding geographic region, fees, and dispute resolution processes; and information as to each program's expertise, including process and subject matter expertise;
- (b) Trial Court Department Plans. Each Trial Court department shall develop plans each fiscal year for the use of court-connected dispute resolution services by the courts in the department. The Chief Justice shall develop the plan in consultation with the department advisory committee, the department coordinator of court-connected dispute resolution services, and the courts in the department. Services may be provided only by programs on the list developed pursuant to paragraph (a) of Rule 4. The plan shall set forth information about court-connected dispute resolution services in the department, including at least the following: current status, goals and objectives, plans for the coming year, any plans for collaborating with other departments, a budget request, case selection and screening criteria, plans for early intervention, and needs for education programs. Where appropriate, each portion of the plan shall address: plans with respect to access to dispute resolution services, the quality of the services, and efforts to foster innovation in the delivery of services. Plans shall ensure that court-connected dispute resolution services are available to those who lack the financial resources to pay for the services and those who would not otherwise have access to the services. The plans shall be submitted by September 1 of each year to the Chief Justice for Administration and Management for review and approval.
- (c) Pilot Programs for Mandatory Participation in Dispute Resolution Services. Any Trial Court department may propose to the Chief Justice for Administration and Management for review and approval an experimental pilot program which requires parties in civil cases to participate in non-binding forms of dispute resolution services. No Trial Court department shall administer such a pilot program without the approval of the Chief Justice for Administration and Management. Case types not suitable for dispute resolution services should be identified. The pilot program may provide for the mandatory participation of the parties and shall be assessed regularly to control quality. The minimal requirements for mandatory participation shall be as follows:
 - (i) each party shall be provided with an opportunity to terminate the dispute resolution services, upon motion to the court for good cause shown, but unwillingness to participate shall not be considered good cause;
 - (ii) the court shall give preference to a dispute resolution process upon which the parties agree;

- (iii) the court shall explicitly inform parties that, although they are required to participate, they are not required to settle the case while participating in dispute resolution services; and
- (iv) no fees may be charged for mandatory participation in dispute resolution services, but the court may charge fees for elective dispute resolution services.
- (d) Funding of Court-connected Dispute Resolution Services. As part of the annual budget requests required by G.L. c. 211B, §10(viii) and (x), the Chief Justice of each Trial Court department shall include a request for funding for court-connected dispute resolution services. The budget request shall provide for the funding of court-connected dispute resolution services for those parties who lack the financial resources to pay for the services or who would not otherwise have access to the services. Funds may be used for approved programs to provide screening and to provide and/or administer the services. Budget requests shall estimate funds needed to maintain previously funded services provided by approved programs. Additional amounts shall be used for the expansion or improvement of services or for innovative services. Expenditures shall be subject to the approval of the Chief Justice for Administration and Management after consultation with the Standing Committee.

(e) Contracts for Court-connected Dispute Resolution Services.

- (i) If public funds are appropriated or otherwise available and allocated by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management of the Trial Court for contracts with court connected dispute resolution programs, the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, in consultation with First Justices or other justices with administrative responsibility for courts and the Chief Justices of affected departments, shall issue one or more requests for proposals for dispute resolution services to be provided by contracts with approved programs, shall select programs through a competitive bidding process, and shall execute contracts for services on behalf of departments and courts which may extend for no more than three years. These contracts may provide for a program to receive payments approved under paragraph (d) and may provide that a court will refer all or most of its cases requiring dispute resolution services to one or more contracting programs.
- (ii) If public funds are not involved, but courts seek an exclusive arrangement with a program or programs for court-connected dispute resolution services, the Chief Justice of the affected department or his or her designee shall, in consultation with the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, issue one or more requests for proposals to be provided by contracts with approved programs, shall select programs through a competitive process, and, with the approval of the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, shall execute contracts for services on behalf of departments and courts which may extend for no more than three years. These contracts may provide that a court will refer all or most of its cases requiring dispute resolution services to one or more contracting programs.
- (iii) In selecting programs with which to contract, the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, or the Chief Justice of the department, as applicable, is encouraged to give preference to programs which demonstrate a record of and commitment to maintaining a diverse roster and operating in a manner which is accountable to the community.
- (iv) The competitive bidding requirements in this subsection shall not apply to programs in which dispute resolution services are provided exclusively by court employees.

(f) Complaint Mechanism. The Chief Justice for Administration and Management, in consultation with the Chief Justices of the departments and with the advice of the Standing Committee, shall develop a uniform procedure for handling complaints regarding court-connected dispute resolution services.

- (a) Development of List of Approved Programs. Two Supreme Judicial Court Commissions have recommended measures like those contained in this paragraph and Rule 6(a) to ensure fair access to court appointments. See, Gender Bias Study of the Massachusetts Court System, Supreme Judicial Court, (1989), p.168 and Equal Justice, Commission to Study Racial and Ethnic Bias in the Courts, Supreme Judicial Court, (1994), p.128-129.
- (b) Trial Court Department Plans. The department plans are expected to be incremental, starting in the first year with a simple description of current and planned services and funding needs, and becoming gradually more extensive in future years. One desirable feature of department plans would be to aim for a consistent level in the quality and quantity of services in all courts across the state.

The criteria governing case selection should identify any categories of case which the department determines should be routinely excluded from dispute resolution as a matter of policy. For example, some commentators believe that courts should not, without a compelling countervailing reason, refer cases to dispute resolution services when there is a need for public sanctioning of conduct or a public declaration of rights, when repetitive violations of statutes or regulations need to be dealt with collectively and uniformly, or when a party or parties are not able to negotiate effectively themselves or with assistance of counsel.

Trial Court department chief justices should gather sufficient information from courts within the department to oversee the courts' use of dispute resolution services pursuant to the Uniform Rules on Dispute Resolution, and, in addition to or as part of the plans required by this section, should submit reports each year to the Chief Justice for Administration and Management about that department's use of court-connected dispute resolution services. The reports should contain information requested by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, including (i) a narrative of significant program developments and activities; and (ii) case record information. Program developments and activities should be described with reference to stated goals and objectives, including: accessibility, quality, collaborative activities, new initiatives, unexpected outcomes, and early intervention initiatives. The Chief Justice for Administration and Management should request case record information needed to plan and oversee court-connected dispute resolution services under these rules, including case record information by type of dispute resolution process, such as total numbers of: cases screened, pretrial referrals, types of cases, cases referred, cases which entered a dispute resolution process, cases in which agreement was reached and not reached, cases in which resolution is pending, referrals made by each court to each approved program, referrals accepted by each program, and cases reviewed by early intervention processes. Each court and program would need to keep records on case record information in order to comply with any such request. See Rule 6(g).

- (c) Pilot Programs for Mandatory Participation in Dispute Resolution Services. In designing pilot programs, courts will comply with G.L. c. 209A, §3, which provides that in abuse prevention proceedings, "No court may compel parties to mediate any aspect of their case."
- (e) Contracts for Court-connected Dispute Resolution Services. Decisions in the awarding of contracts should not be based solely on cost, but should also reflect values and goals such as responsiveness to the community, the availability of a diverse pool of neutrals, outreach abilities, and the need for variety in referrals. See Rules 6(a) and $\underline{7}$ (c) for referral rules affecting programs which are awarded contracts.

(f) Complaint Mechanism. The complaint mechanism should be designed to be accessible and user-friendly. Information about the complaint mechanism should be posted in every courthouse and included in the written information prepared pursuant to Rule 5.

Rule 5 Early Notice of Court-Connected Dispute Resolution Services.

Clerks shall make information about court-connected dispute resolution services available to attorneys and unrepresented parties. This information should state that selection of court-connected dispute resolution services can occur at the early intervention event or sooner, and that no court may compel parties to mediate any aspect of an abuse prevention proceeding under G.L. c. 209A, §3. Insofar as possible, information should be available in the primary language of the parties. Attorneys shall: provide their clients with this information about court-connected dispute resolution services; discuss with their clients the advantages and disadvantages of the various methods of dispute resolution; and certify their compliance with this requirement on the civil cover sheet or its equivalent.

Commentary

Information about the availability of court-connected dispute resolution services should be added to the standard summons form.

Although the rule is limited to civil cases, courts are encouraged to distribute information about court-connected dispute resolution services in appropriate criminal matters, including delinquency cases and hearings on applications for criminal complaints pursuant to G.L. c. 218, §35A.

The information made available by clerks should include a general description of dispute resolution services, an explanation of reasons for choosing whether or not to use these services in different kinds of cases, an enumeration of the services available by referral from the court where the complaint is filed, information designed to ensure that pro se litigants make informed choices about the use of these services, information about the process for filing complaints regarding court-connected dispute resolution services, notice of the right to bring an adviser of one's own choice to a dispute resolution session pursuant to Rule 7(d), and information about the right to an interpreter's services throughout a legal proceeding pursuant to G.L. c. 221C. To the extent possible, courts should also provide pro se litigants with written information containing answers to frequently asked questions (regarding statutory rights, for example).

Rule 6 Duties of Courts with Respect to Court-Connected Dispute Resolution Services.

(a) Referral of Cases. No court may refer cases to a provider of dispute resolution services unless the provider is an approved program included on the list developed pursuant to Rule 4(a). In all cases, courts shall inform parties that they are free to choose any approved program on the list, subject to such reasonable limitations as the court may impose, or any other provider of dispute resolution services. If the parties are unable or unwilling to choose a program from the list or another provider, a court may make a referral to a specific program on the list in which the court has confidence, whether or not the court has a contract for services with that program. The court shall make a reasonable effort to distribute such specific referrals fairly among programs on the list, taking into consideration geographic proximity, subject matter competence, special needs of the parties, and fee levels. In the alternative, a court may refer all or most of its cases requiring dispute resolution services to one or more approved programs in which the roster consists exclusively of one or more court employees or with which it has a contract for services pursuant to Rule 4(e). Notwithstanding the foregoing, a court may refer a case to a provider that is not on the list in exceptional circumstances, when special needs of the parties cannot be met by a program on the list. The judge shall report any such referral and the exceptional circumstances which required it to the Chief Justice of the department. In a criminal case, the court shall consult with the prosecuting attorney and obtain the approval of the defendant and, where applicable, the victim, before making a referral to a dispute resolution program.

- (b) Screening. In civil cases, courts may require parties and/or their attorneys to attend a screening session or an early intervention event regarding court-connected dispute resolution services except for good cause shown.
- (c) Time for Dispute Resolution. A court may establish a deadline for the completion of a court-connected dispute resolution process, which may be extended by the court upon a showing by the parties that continuation of the process is likely to assist in reaching resolution.
- (d) Choice. No court shall require parties to participate in dispute resolution services without meeting the minimal requirements set forth in Rule 4(c), except that Probate and Family Courts may require parties to participate in dispute intervention. Except in a case affected by a pilot program under Rule 4(c) or a case involving such a referral to dispute intervention, the court shall inform litigants, both at the time of referral and at the beginning of the dispute resolution process, that the decision to participate in a dispute resolution process is voluntary.
- (e) Space for Dispute Resolution Sessions. Courts may, subject to guidelines issued by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management of the Trial Court, provide available courthouse space or other resources for court-connected dispute resolution services provided by approved programs. The space provided shall be sufficiently private and readily accessible. Reasonable accommodation shall be made for disabled individuals.

(f) Communication with Program or Neutral.

- (i) The court shall give a program which is providing court-connected dispute resolution services sufficient information to process the case effectively.
- (ii) The program shall give the court's administrative staff sufficient case-specific and aggregate information to permit monitoring and evaluation of the services.
- (iii) Communication with the court during the dispute resolution process shall be conducted only by the parties or with their consent. The parties may agree, as part of the dispute resolution process, as to the scope of the information which they, the program, or the neutral will provide to the court. Absent an agreement of the parties and subject to the provisions of Rule 9 regarding confidentiality and subparagraph (iv) below, the program or neutral may provide only the following information to the court: a request by the parties for additional time to complete dispute resolution, the neutral's assessment that the case is inappropriate for dispute resolution, and the fact that the dispute resolution process has concluded without parties' having reached agreement.

- (iv) At the conclusion of conciliation or dispute intervention, the program or neutral may communicate to the court recommendations, a list of those issues which are and are not resolved, and the program's or neutral's assessment that the case will go to trial or settle, provided that the parties are informed at the initiation of the process that such communication may occur.
- (g) Data Collection. The court, in collaboration with the approved program or programs to which it refers cases, shall develop a system to record accurately and compile regularly data sufficient to track cases, monitor services, and provide any information required or requested by the applicable Trial Court department chief justice or the Chief Justice for Administration and Management.
- (h) Intake and Selection. Every court shall evaluate cases to ensure that they are appropriate for dispute resolution based on the case selection criteria of the applicable department developed pursuant to Rule 4(b).
- (i) Inappropriate Pressure to Settle. Courts shall inform parties that, unless otherwise required by law, they are not required to make offers and concessions or to settle in a court-connected dispute resolution process. Courts shall not impose sanctions for nonsettlement by the parties. The court shall give particular attention to the issues presented by unrepresented parties, such as the need for the neutral to memorialize the agreement and the danger of coerced settlement in cases involving an imbalance of power between the parties. In dispute intervention, in cases in which one or more of the parties is not represented by counsel, a neutral has a responsibility, while maintaining impartiality, to raise questions for the parties to consider as to whether they have the information needed to reach a fair and fully informed settlement of the case.
- (j) Sanctions for Failure to Attend Sessions. A court may impose sanctions for failure without good cause to attend a mandatory screening session, an early intervention event, or a scheduled dispute resolution session.

Commentary

(a) Referral of Cases. Parties who are interested in dispute resolution services should be referred to the court's dispute resolution coordinator for assistance in those courts which neither offer a program operated by a court employee nor have a contract with any program, or which have contracts with more than one program.

This paragraph governs court referrals and does not alter the fact that parties may obtain dispute resolution services on their own initiative from a neutral or organization not on the list, consistent with the schedule established by the court.

Courts are encouraged to provide neutrals with information about counsel for indigent persons in civil cases, including information about legal services, lawyer referral services, or volunteer programs such as "lawyer of the day."

ADR has been used successfully by the courts in a wide range of both civil and criminal cases, and in matters that might otherwise become the subject of civil or criminal litigation. The courts should undertake further exploration of the use of ADR in both civil and criminal matters. There are, however, policy reasons which make the use of ADR inappropriate in some cases. See Commentary to Rule 4(b). This paragraph does not limit the discretion of the prosecuting attorney in a criminal case to commence or proceed with the prosecution of the case, nor does it enlarge the limited authority of the court to dismiss a criminal case.

- (f) Communication with Program or Neutral. This rule is not intended to remove the evidentiary bar against the admissibility of settlement discussions. In appropriate cases, the court should make the case file available to the neutral. Subparagraph (iv) applies only to the processes of conciliation and dispute intervention, and does not affect other dispute resolution processes.
- (g) Data Collection. The court shall make available to the neutral, upon request, information as to whether a case has been referred to the neutral by the court.
- (i) Inappropriate Pressure to Settle. Courts and programs should consider the use of checklists or other forms for the gathering of information by the neutral in dispute intervention, in order to aid the neutral in discussing with unrepresented parties relevant factual circumstances and issues which might go unaddressed without such tools. In addition, courts should make their facilities available to "lawyer of the day" programs, to which neutrals or the court can refer unrepresented parties for legal advice.
- (j) Sanctions for Failure to Attend Sessions. Sanctions should be imposed only by order of a judge and only in the case of willful failure to attend an event or session.

Rule 7 Duties of Approved Programs with Respect to Court-Connected Dispute Resolution Services.

- (a) Program Administration. Programs shall be monitored and evaluated on a regular basis. Settlement rates shall not be the sole criterion for evaluation. Every program shall evaluate its neutrals on a regular basis. Every program shall develop and comply with written policies and procedures governing program administration and operations, including policies regarding evaluation, facilities, communication with the court, data collection, pressure to settle, and intake and selection, which are consistent with policies developed by Trial Court departments pursuant to Rule 3(c) and with Rules 4(a) and 6(a), (e), (f), (g), (h) and (i). A program may refuse to accept a referral from a court if the case does not meet the program's intake and selection criteria.
- (b) Diversity. Programs shall be designed with knowledge of and sensitivity to the diversity of the communities served. The design shall take into consideration such factors as the languages, dispute resolution styles, and ethnic traditions of communities likely to use the services. Programs shall not discriminate against staff, neutrals, volunteers, or clients on the basis of race, color, sex, age, religion, national origin, disability, political beliefs or sexual orientation. Programs shall actively strive to achieve diversity among staff, neutrals, and volunteers.
- (c) Rosters. Programs shall (i) assemble, maintain and administer rosters of qualified neutrals in conformity with these rules; (ii) except in the case of programs in which the roster consists exclusively of court employees, make a reasonable effort to distribute referrals fairly among individuals on the list, taking into consideration geographic proximity, subject matter competence, special needs of the parties, scheduling, and fee levels; (iii) adopt a fair and reasonable method by which qualified individuals may join the roster at its inception, when vacancies occur, or when the caseload requires additional neutrals; and (iv) adopt a fair and reasonable method by which individuals may be removed from the roster, including a provision for a periodic review of the roster. The methods used by the program for adding and removing neutrals shall be set forth in writing and made available to individuals applying for affiliation.

- (d) Presence of Advisers. Parties, in consultation with their attorneys, if any, shall be permitted to decide whether their attorney, advocate or other adviser will be present at court-connected dispute resolution sessions.
- (e) Fees. Programs may charge fees for service. Parties shall not be charged a fee for attendance at a mandatory screening session or an early intervention event, or for dispute resolution services provided by court employees. Fees charged by a provider of court-connected dispute resolution services shall be approved by the Chief Justice of the applicable court department. The fee schedule shall provide for fee waived or reduced fee services to be made available to indigent and low income litigants. Fees may not be contingent upon the result of the dispute resolution process or the amount of the settlement. Neutrals may assist parties to negotiate an equitable allocation of fees.
- (f) Dispute Resolution Sessions. The program shall make reasonable efforts to schedule dispute resolution sessions at the convenience of the parties. The program shall allow adequate time in the dispute resolution session to discuss issues and reach settlement.
- (g) Written Agreement. If a settlement is reached, the agreement shall be prepared in writing and signed by the parties, who shall forward for docketing a notice of the disposition of the case to the clerk of the court in which the case is pending. The neutral may participate in the preparation of the written agreement. At the parties' request, the court may allow an oral agreement instead of a written one.
- (h) Orientation and Supervision of Neutrals. The program shall ensure that neutrals are familiar with the policies and operations of the court and the program. The program shall supervise its neutrals. During dispute resolution sessions, newly trained neutrals shall have immediate access to an experienced neutral.
- (i) Enforcement of Qualifications Standards and Ethical Standards. Each approved program shall be responsible for enforcing the qualifications standards in Rule 8 and the ethical standards in Rule 9, and for taking appropriate action if a neutral on its roster fails or ceases to meet the qualifications standards or violates the ethical standards. Appropriate actions include referral for further training, suspension from the roster, or removal from the roster. If the Chief Justice of a Trial Court Department directs a program to take such action as a result of a complaint about the neutral and the program refuses to act, the Chief Justice may revoke the program's status as a program approved to receive referrals from that department.

(a) Program Administration. Evaluation methods should be designed to incorporate the experiences of disputants.

Rule 8 Qualification Standards for Neutrals.

(a) Purpose and Applicability. The purpose of setting qualifications standards for neutrals who receive court referrals is to foster high quality dispute resolution services. This rule shall apply to neutrals who provide mediation, arbitration, conciliation, case evaluation, dispute intervention, mini-trials or summary jury trials in court-connected programs.

(b) General Provisions.

- (i) General Qualifications Requirements. To be qualified to provide dispute resolution services for cases referred by a court to an approved program, a neutral shall satisfy the requirements specified in this rule for the particular process which he or she provides unless exempted pursuant to Rule 8(k). A neutral may meet one or all of these requirements using the alternative method, if any, specified for the particular process, pursuant to Rule 8(j). To remain qualified, neutrals shall satisfy the continuing education and continuing evaluation requirements, if any, specified in this rule for the particular process.
- (ii) Additional Qualifications. Trial Court Departments may establish additional qualifications for neutrals in approved programs in addition to those set forth in this rule provided they are consistent with these rules. In establishing such additional standards, court departments may provide for consideration of such factors as an individual's experience as a neutral, educational background, work experience, or subject matter expertise, and may also require such neutrals to complete specialized training or demonstrate subject matter expertise. Academic degrees and professional licensure may be among the factors considered but cannot be used as preclusive criteria by court departments in establishing additional qualifications for mediators or arbitrators participating in approved programs.
- (iii) Competence. In qualifying mediators and arbitrators to handle court referrals, approved programs may consider such factors as an individual's experience as a mediator or arbitrator, educational background, work experience and subject matter expertise. Academic degrees and professional licensure may be among the factors considered but cannot be used as preclusive criteria by approved programs in qualifying mediators and arbitrators for inclusion in court panels. Academic degrees and professional licensure may be used as preclusive criteria for qualifying conciliators, case evaluators, mini-trial neutrals and summary jury trial neutrals.
- (iv) Duties of the Chief Justice for Administration and Management. The Chief Justice for Administration and Management (CJAM) shall oversee and monitor the implementation of this rule, and suggest changes as needed. The CJAM shall, in consultation with the Standing Committee, develop guidelines for implementing the provisions of this rule. The CJAM shall collect, publish and distribute to approved programs any changes in the guidelines, and shall maintain the annual certifications submitted by approved programs as to the training, evaluation, mentoring and continuing education of neutrals.
- (v) Duties of Approved Programs. Each approved program shall ensure that the neutrals on its roster meet the applicable training, mentoring, evaluation, continuing education, continuing evaluation, professional and experience requirements set forth in this rule and the guidelines adopted pursuant to Rule 8(b)(iv), and any additional qualification requirements adopted by a Trial Court Department. Each approved program shall ensure that the neutrals meet the standards set forth in the rule and guidelines, that any alternative method relied upon by a neutral to meet the standards is in compliance with Rule 8(j) and the guidelines, and that reliance upon the limited exemption is in compliance with Rule 8(k). To carry out these duties, each program shall take the following specific actions:

- (a) Attest in its application for program approval that it will assign cases referred by a court only to neutrals who meet the qualifications standards;
- (b) Maintain for the tenure of the neutral's association with the program, and for three years thereafter, documentation which demonstrates that the neutral meets the qualifications standards. Such documentation shall include, without limitation, the following:
- (i) Name of the neutral;
- (ii) Name of the training organization where the neutral satisfactorily completed any required training (or documentation of the neutral's compliance with the alternative method of meeting any training requirement pursuant to Rule 8(j));
- (iii) Outcome of any required mentoring and evaluation for each neutral (or documentation of the neutral's compliance with the alternative method of meeting any evaluation requirement pursuant to Rule 8(j));
- (iv) Documentation of the neutral's participation in any required continuing education and in any required continuing evaluation;
- (v) Documentation demonstrating that the neutral meets any applicable requirements as to professional licensure, experience or subject matter expertise; and
- (vi) Documentation demonstrating that the neutral qualifies for the limited exemption set forth in Rule 8(k).
- (c) Certify annually to the AOTC that the neutrals on its roster meet the requirements for training, mentoring and evaluation, and continuing education set forth in this rule and the guidelines.

- (iv) Continuing Evaluation. A provider of dispute resolution services shall participate in regular evaluation as may be required by the relevant Trial Court Department.
- (j) Alternative Methods of Satisfying Requirements. A neutral may be qualified by a program to handle cases referred by a court by demonstrating that he or she meets the alternative methods set forth in the guidelines of satisfying the training, mentoring and evaluation requirements set forth in this rule and the guidelines. Programs that seek to qualify neutrals through the alternative methods provision are required to compile necessary documentation pursuant to Rule 8(b)(v) and applicable guidelines.
- (k) Limited Exemption from Training, Mentoring and Evaluation Requirements. As a general rule, all neutrals in approved programs shall satisfy the training, mentoring and evaluation requirements set forth in Rule 8. However, the Chief Justice of any Trial Court Department may elect, as a one-time exception to this rule, to exempt mediators, arbitrators, case evaluators, and conciliators from those requirements, subject to the provisions set forth below. The Chief Justice for Administration and Management shall establish a process for notification and a deadline for submission by departmental Chief Justices of their decision to utilize the exemption, and for programs to apply for the exemption.
 - (i) One-Time Exemption of Certain Neutrals. This exemption will be a one-time option available only to those mediators, arbitrators, case evaluators and conciliators who meet the requirements set forth in Rule 8(k). No other neutral shall be exempted from the training, mentoring or evaluation requirements of Rule 8.
 - (ii) Designation of Neutrals. Each program approved on or before July 1, 2002, by a Department in which this exemption is available pursuant to this Rule and which continues as an approved program on the date on which Rule 8 becomes effective shall submit to the Chief Justice of that Department pursuant to the process established by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management, a list of any mediators, arbitrators, case evaluators and conciliators who qualify for the exemption. The program shall include a complete and detailed description of the qualifications of each such mediator, arbitrator, case evaluator or conciliator as evidence of his or her eligibility.

- (iii) Requirements for Exemption. A program may consider a neutral eligible for this exemption only if he or she was serving as of July 1, 2002, on a panel of a program approved on or before that date which continues as an approved program on the date on which Rule 8 becomes effective. In addition, a program shall consider the neutral's overall experience and other factors under Rule 8 (e.g. prior training, mentoring, evaluation, the recency of his or her experience and the number and types of cases handled). An eligible individual must have served in the process for which he or she is seeking exemption for five years during the last six years prior to July 1, 2002, and meet the following additional requirement:
 - (a) Mediators. Must have provided at least 300 hours of mediation during that period.
 - (b) Arbitrators. Must have provided at least 150 hours of arbitration during that period.

 - (d) Conciliators. Must have provided at least 100 hours of conciliation during that period.
- (iv) Transferability of Exemption. A mediator, arbitrator, case evaluator or conciliator who qualifies for this exemption in a Trial Court Department shall be qualified to provide services in the process in which he or she is exempted in another approved program within that Department subject to the approval of the other program. A mediator, arbitrator, case evaluator or conciliator who seeks exemption in another Department must meet the exemption through a program approved in that other Department.
- (v) Limitations on Exemption. This provision does not exempt any mediator, arbitrator, case evaluator or conciliator from complying with the continuing education and continuing evaluation requirements of Rule 8.
- (I) Effective Date. The effective date of this rule shall be January 1, 2005, except that to be qualified to provide dispute intervention, individuals employed by the courts on the effective date of this rule shall have until January 1, 2007 to demonstrate compliance with the requirements set forth in this rule. Employees hired to provide dispute intervention after the effective date of this rule must satisfy all the requirements of this rule within thirty-six (36) months of the date of hire.

Rule 9 Ethical Standards.

(a) Introduction. These Ethical Standards are designed to promote honesty, integrity and impartiality by all neutrals and other individuals involved in providing court-connected dispute resolution services. These standards seek to assure the courts and citizens of the Commonwealth that such services are of the highest quality, and to promote confidence in these dispute resolution services. In addition, these standards are intended as a foundation on which appellate courts and Trial Court departments can build their dispute resolution policies, programs and procedures to best serve the public. These Standards apply to all neutrals as defined in these Standards when they are providing court-connected dispute resolution services for the Trial Court and the appellate courts, including those who are state or other public employees. State and other public employees are subject to the Massachusetts Conflict of Interest Law, M.G.L. c. 268A, and therefore, to the extent that these standards are in any manner inconsistent with M.G.L. c. 268A, the statute shall govern. In addition, to the extent that these standards are in any manner inconsistent with the Standards and Forms For Probation Offices of the Probate and Family Court Department promulgated by the Office of the Commissioner of Probation effective July 1, 1994, the Probation Standards shall govern. All courts providing dispute resolution services and all court-connected dispute resolution programs shall provide the neutrals with a copy of these Ethical Standards. These Standards shall be made a part of all training and educational programs for approved programs, and shall be available to the public.

- (b) Impartiality. A neutral shall provide dispute resolution services in an impartial manner. Impartiality means freedom from favoritism and bias in conduct as well as appearance.
 - (i) A neutral shall provide dispute resolution services only for those disputes where she or he can be impartial with respect to all of the parties and the subject matter of the dispute.
 - (ii) If at any time prior to or during the dispute resolution process the neutral is unable to conduct the process in an impartial manner, the neutral shall so inform the parties and shall withdraw from providing services, even if the parties express no objection to the neutral continuing to provide services.
 - (iii) No neutral or any member of the neutral's immediate family or his or her agent shall request, solicit, receive, or accept any in-kind gifts or any type of compensation other than the court-established fee in connection with any matter coming before the neutral.
- (c) Informed Consent. The neutral shall make every reasonable effort to ensure that each party to the dispute resolution process (a) understands the nature and character of the process, and (b) in consensual processes, understands and voluntarily consents to any agreement reached in the process.
 - (i) A neutral shall make every reasonable effort to ensure at every stage of the proceedings that each party understands the dispute resolution process in which he or she is participating. The neutral shall explain (a) the respective responsibilities of the neutral and the parties, and (b) the policies, procedures and guidelines applicable to the process, including circumstances under which the neutral may engage in private communications with one or more of the parties.
 - (ii) If at any time the neutral believes that any party to the dispute resolution process is unable to understand the process or participate fully in it whether because of mental impairment, emotional disturbance, intoxication, language barriers, or other reasons the neutral shall (a) limit the scope of the dispute resolution process in a manner consistent with the party's ability to participate, and/or recommend that the party obtain appropriate assistance in order to continue with the process, or (b) terminate the dispute resolution process.
 - (iii) Where a party is unrepresented by counsel and where the neutral believes that independent legal counsel and/or independent expert information or advice is needed to reach an informed agreement or to protect the rights of one or more of the parties, the neutral shall so inform the party or parties.

- (iv) A neutral may use his or her knowledge to inform the parties' deliberations, but shall not provide legal advice, counseling, or other professional services in connection with the dispute resolution process.
- (v) The neutral shall inform the parties of their right to withdraw from the process at any time and for any reason, except as is provided by law or court rule.
- (vi) In mediation, case evaluation, and other processes whose outcome depends upon the agreement of the parties, the neutral shall not coerce the parties in any manner to reach agreement.
- (vii) In dispute intervention, in cases in which one or more of the parties is not represented by counsel, a neutral has a responsibility, while maintaining impartiality, to raise questions for the parties to consider as to whether they have the information needed to reach a fair and fully informed settlement of the case.
- (d) Fees. A neutral shall disclose to the parties the fees that will be charged, if any, for the dispute resolution services being provided.
 - (i) A neutral shall inform each party in a court-connected dispute resolution process in writing, prior to the start of the process, of (a) the fees, if any, that will be charged for the process, (b) if there will be a fee, whether it will be paid to the neutral, court, and/or the program, and (c) whether the parties may apply for a fee-waiver or other reduction of fees.
 - (ii) If a fee is charged for the dispute resolution process, the neutral shall enter into a written agreement with the parties, before the dispute resolution process begins, stating the fees and time and manner of payment.
 - (iii) Fee agreements may not be contingent upon the result of the dispute resolution process or amount of the settlement.
 - (iv) Neutrals shall not accept, provide, or promise a fee or other consideration for giving or receiving a referral of any matter.
 - (v) If the court has established fees for its dispute resolution services, no neutral shall request, solicit, receive, or accept any payment in any amount greater than the court-established fees when providing court-connected dispute resolution services.
- (e) Conflict of Interest. A neutral shall disclose to all parties participating in the dispute resolution process all actual or potential conflicts of interest, including circumstances that could give rise to an appearance of conflict. A neutral shall not serve as a neutral in a dispute resolution process after he or she knows of such a conflict, unless the parties, after being informed of the actual or potential conflict, give their consent and the neutral has determined that the conflict is not so significant as to cast doubt on the integrity of the dispute resolution process and/or neutral.

- (i) As early as possible and throughout the dispute resolution process, the neutral shall disclose to all parties participating in the process, all actual or potential conflicts of interest, including but not limited to the following:
 - (a) any known current or past personal or professional relationship with any of the parties or their attorneys;
 - (b) any financial interest, direct or indirect in the subject matter of the dispute or a financial relationship (such as a business association or other financial relationship) with the parties, their attorneys, or immediate family member of any party or their attorney, to the dispute resolution proceeding; and
 - (c) any other circumstances that could create an appearance of conflict of interest.
- (ii) Where the neutral determines that the conflict is so significant as to cast doubt on the integrity of the dispute resolution process and/or neutral, the neutral shall withdraw from the process, even if the parties express no objection to the neutral continuing to provide services.
- (iii) Where the neutral determines that the conflict is not significant, the neutral shall ask the parties whether they wish the neutral to proceed. The neutral shall obtain consent from all parties before proceeding.
- (iv) A neutral must avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest both during and after the provision of services.
 - (aa) A neutral shall not use the dispute resolution process to solicit, encourage or otherwise procure future service arrangements with any party.
 - (bb) A neutral may not subsequently act on behalf of any party to the dispute resolution process, nor represent one such party against the other, in any matter related to the subject of the dispute resolution process.
 - (cc) A neutral may not subsequently act on behalf of any party to the dispute resolution process, nor represent one such party against the other, in any matter unrelated to the subject of the dispute resolution process for a period of one year, unless the parties to the process consent to such action or representation.
- (v) A neutral shall avoid conflicts of interest in recommending the services of other professionals.
- (f) Responsibility to Non-Participating Parties. A neutral should consider, and where appropriate, encourage the parties to consider, the interests of persons affected by actual or potential agreements and not participating or represented in the process.
 - (i) If a neutral believes that the interests of parties not participating or represented in the process will be affected by actual or potential agreements, the neutral should ask the parties to consider the effects of including or not including the absent parties and/or their representatives in the process. This obligation is particularly important when the interests of children or other individuals who are not able to protect their own interests are involved.

- (g) Advertising, Soliciting, or Other Communications by Neutrals. Neutrals shall be truthful in advertising, soliciting, or other communications regarding the provision of dispute resolution services.
 - (i) A neutral shall not make untruthful or exaggerated claims about the dispute resolution process, its costs and benefits, its outcomes, or the neutral's qualifications and abilities.
 - (ii) A neutral shall not make claims of specific results, benefits, outcomes, or promises which imply favor of one side over another.
- (h) Confidentiality. A neutral shall maintain the confidentiality of all information disclosed during the course of dispute resolution proceedings, subject only to the exceptions listed in this section.
 - (i) The information disclosed in dispute resolution proceedings that shall be kept confidential by the neutral includes, but is not limited to: the identity of the parties; the nature and substance of the dispute; the neutral's impressions, opinions, and recommendations; notes made by the neutral; statements, documents or other physical evidence disclosed by any participant in the dispute resolution process; and the terms of any settlement, award, or other resolution of the dispute, unless disclosure is required by law or court rule.
 - (ii) Confidentiality vis-à-vis nonparties. The neutral shall inform the participants in the dispute resolution process that he or she will not voluntarily disclose to any person not participating in the mediation any of the information obtained through the process, unless such disclosure is required by law.
 - (iii) Confidentiality within mediation. A neutral shall respect the confidentiality of information received in a private session or discussion with one or more of the parties in a dispute resolution process, and shall not reveal this information to any other party in the mediation without prior permission from the party from whom the information was received.
 - (iv) Neutrals who are part of a court-connected dispute resolution program may, for purposes of supervising the program, supervising neutrals and monitoring of agreements, discuss confidential information with other neutrals and administrative staff in the program. This permission to discuss confidential information does not extend to individuals outside their program.
 - (v) Neutrals may, with prior permission from the parties, use information disclosed by the parties in dispute resolution proceedings for research, training, or statistical purposes, provided the materials are adapted so as to remove any identifying information.
- (i) Withdrawing from the Dispute Resolution Process. A neutral shall withdraw from the dispute resolution process if continuation of the process would violate any of the Ethical Standards, if the safety of any of the parties would be jeopardized, or if the neutral is unable to provide effective service.

- (i) Withdrawal must be accomplished in a manner which, to the extent possible, does not prejudice the rights or jeopardize the safety of the parties.
- (ii) A neutral may withdraw from the dispute resolution process if the neutral believes that (a) one or more of the parties is not acting in good faith; (b) the parties' agreement would be illegal or involve the commission of a crime; (c) continuing the dispute resolution process would give rise to an appearance of impropriety; (d) in a process whose outcome depends upon the agreement of the parties, continuing with the process would cause severe harm to a non-participating party, or the public; and (e) continuing discussions would not be in the best interest of the parties, their minor children, or the dispute resolution program.

- (b) Impartiality. A neutral's obligation is to act on the basis of what he or she subjectively believes may be the appearance of favoritism or bias and also on the basis of what the neutral reasonably believes others would think.
- (c) Informed Consent. (i) In arbitration, private communications involving the neutral andless than all of the parties and/or their attorneys concerning the substance of the dispute would be improper unless all parties agree otherwise in advance.
- (ii) In making a recommendation that a party obtain assistance, the neutral shall avoid making any disclosure to other parties in the dispute resolution process which would (a) compromise the confidentiality of communications between the neutral and the party in need of assistance, (b) detrimentally affect the interests of the party in need of assistance, or (c) impair the impartiality (or perceived impartiality) of the neutral. In seeking appropriate assistance, neutrals should be aware of parties' right, pursuant to G.L. c. 221C, to interpreter's services throughout a legal proceeding.
- (iii) This Standard is ordinarily not applicable in arbitration. See also commentary to previous section.

Courts are encouraged to develop and foster innovative approaches to serving unrepresented parties, such as "lawyers of the day," pro bono panels, lay advocates, information rooms inside the court, assignment of counsel, mediation assistants, substantive written information, the use of volunteer mediators to supplement court employees in busy sessions such as the Boston Housing Court, the use of a different ADR process, substantive checklists, and judicial participation in the review of agreements.

- (iv) The provision in this Standard permitting a neutral to use his or her knowledge to inform the parties' deliberations is ordinarily not applicable in arbitration.
- (v) In arbitration, the parties may not have the right to withdraw from the proceedings.
- (d) Fees. For purposes of this subsection, fees may include the neutral's fees, administrative fees, and related expenses.
- (iv) This provision is not intended to prohibit neutrals from paying an administrative or panel membership fee.
- (e) Conflict of Interest. (i) Individuals are not prohibited from serving as neutrals for parties for whom they or members of their firm have provided services or are currently providing services as long as full disclosure of the relationship is made and (i) after disclosure (ii) the parties consent to the neutral's serving in the case and (iii) the neutral determines that the conflict is not significant enough to cast doubt on the integrity of the process and the neutral. However, neutrals should be particularly sensitive to the fact that circumstances may arise while serving as a neutral for a party who is currently a client of his or her firm which can give rise to a conflict requiring withdrawal, especially when it involves a matter related to the dispute to which the neutral has been assigned.

- (iv) The provisions in this subparagraph do not apply to other individuals with whom the neutral is in business, such as other lawyers in the neutral's firm, or other mental health professionals in a neutral's group practice, nor do they apply to situations where the neutral has served in the past as a neutral in a dispute resolution process involving any party to the current dispute resolution process. Consent is not waivable in advance of the dispute resolution process, but may be waived after the dispute resolution process. A dispute should be considered "related to" another matter if the facts involved in the dispute resolution process are so germane to the later matter that (a) a party in the earlier matter would be unfairly disadvantaged by the neutral's involvement in the later matter or (b) a party in the later matter would be unfairly disadvantaged by the neutral's involvement in the earlier matter.
- (h) Confidentiality. (i) This rule is not applicable to arbitration, in which private communications involving the neutral and less than all of the parties and/or their attorneys would be improper unless all parties agree otherwise in advance.
- (iv) Individuals who administer court-connected dispute resolution programs are also bound by these standards. See definition of "neutral" in Rule 2.
- (v) Ethical vs. statutory obligations: The provisions in this section concerning confidentiality govern the ethical obligations of the neutral but may not bar compelled disclosure of confidential communications, by means of subpoena or other court process. G. L. c.233, §23C, which governs mediation, may prohibit disclosure of communications made in the course of a mediation (as defined in the statute) even if those communications relate to child abuse or neglect or life threatening situations. Other statutes, such as c.119, §51A (the mandated reporter statute) may also govern the obligation to disclose, or maintain confidentiality of, communications relating to child abuse and neglect.

Agreements: In some cases, the confidentiality protection afforded by G. L. c.233, §23C, requires an agreement to mediate. In other dispute resolution processes (such as arbitration, case evaluation, and conciliation), where there is no statutory protection for confidentiality, it may be desirable for the parties to execute an agreement which provides for confidentiality of the process.

1:19 Electronic Access to the Courts.

- 1. Covert photography, recording or transmission prohibited. No person shall take any photographs, or make any recording or transmission by electronic means, in any courtroom, hearing room, office, chambers or lobby of a judge or magistrate without prior authorization from the judge or magistrate then having immediate supervision over such place.
- 2. Electronic access by the news media. A judge shall permit photographing or electronic recording or transmitting of courtroom proceedings open to the public by the news media for news gathering purposes and dissemination of information to the public, subject to the limitations of this rule. Subject to the provisions of paragraph (d), the news media shall be permitted to possess and to operate in the courtroom all devices and equipment necessary to such activities. Such devices and equipment include, without limitation, still and video cameras, audio recording or transmitting devices, and portable computers or other electronic devices with communication capabilities.
