

Build Back Better Immigration Update

Status, likelihood of success and key provisions

Learn about the immigration provisions of the Build Back Better Act. The faculty review the provision that allows the recapture of unused immigration visa numbers and address how it may impact green card applicants. They also discuss additional adjustment of status measures that would permit eligible foreign nationals to submit applications for adjustment of status before an immigrant visa becomes available, and allow certain backlogged adjustment applicants to request an exemption from the immigrant visa quotas. Learn about the details of the proposed temporary parole program with work and travel authorization for certain individuals. Finally, hear the faculty examine the significant new fees the proposed bill would impose on applicants and petitioners for immigration benefits.

Agenda

- Provision Authorizing Recapture of Unused Immigrant Visas
- Provisions Permitting Foreign Nationals to Submit Applications for Adjustment of Status before an Immigrant Visa Becomes Available, and Backlogged Adjustment Applicants to Request an Exemption from Per-Country Immigrant Visa Quotas
- Provision Creating a Temporary Parole Program with Work and Travel Authorization
- Overview of New Fees for Applicants and Petitioners of Immigration Benefits
- Current Status of Bill and Likelihood of Passage

Speakers

MOLLY A. CAREY, a Partner at Fragomen's Boston office, represents top global technology companies, as well as a range of small and medium clients across industries. She provides guidance to corporate clients on a programmatic level and helps them assess the impact of policy changes to their workforce. Molly's practice concerns all aspects of employment-based immigration. She also has extensive experience in advising clients regarding corporate reorganizations, such as mergers and acquisitions, as well as I-9 compliance. Molly regularly works with several Boston area pro bono organizations, including Kids in Need of Defense (KIND) and Project Citizenship. She has also provided pro bono legal services at the immigrant family detention centers in Artesia, New Mexico and Dilley, Texas.

SELA A. STOCKLEY, an Associate at Fragomen's Boston office, represents foreign nationals and employers in a wide range of employment and family-based immigration matters. She has worked extensively on immigrant and nonimmigrant visas, with a focus on EB-1 petitions, National Interest Waivers and O-1 petitions. Sela also has experience with EB-2 petitions, J-1 waivers, marriage petitions (I-130), tourist visa applications (B-2) and naturalization applications (N-400). She has represented clients in both family-based and employment-based I-485 interviews at local USCIS field offices. Sela's pro bono work includes assisting clients with filing naturalization applications. Sela speaks English and Swahili.
